FROM ANAM HARGEY, LICENSED CLINICAL COUNSELOR TURNED BROKER

Moving your family on the North Shore? Five things to talk about first.

1

Agree on the why

Get everyone's reasons on the table: more space, a different school, a shorter commute, less house to keep up. Every later decision gets easier.

2

Plan around the school year

Most families want to move over the summer. Work backward from the date you need to be in, and list with enough time to close.

3

Price from this year's sales

Look at what sold on your street and in your school area in the last six months, not what a neighbor got a few years ago.

4

Fix the small things first

Fresh paint, working lights, clean gutters and a trimmed yard, done before the photos. Buyers notice what's neglected.

5

Know your buy-before-you-sell options

Talk with a lender before you list, so you know whether you can buy the next home first or need to sell first.
